67. (Los Angeles) CENTRAL BUSINESS DISTRICT ASSOCIATION. Transit Study: Los Angeles Metropolitan Area 1944. Los Angeles: Central Business District Assoc., 1944. This is an interesting report on the use of the burgeoning "Parkway" (i.e. Freeway) systems in and around Los Angeles by public transit, specifically the bus or motor coach. Contrary to common perception there were planners in the city who recognized the need for an efficient public transit system. This group of downtown business people had been investing in studies since before the war: "We had before the war an existing public transit system serving over a million riders daily," when plans were adopted for parkways serving the metropolitan area. This study examines ways to utilize the parkway system to improve mass transit. $50.00

First edition. 30 cm; 39 pp.; illustrated from photographs, plans, drawings, and maps. Signs of wear to covers; else a very good copy in spiral-bound wrappers.

68. (---) EAST, E. E. & H. F. HOLLEY. Traffic Survey Los Angeles Metropolitan Area: Nineteen Hundred Thirty-seven. Los Angeles: Automobile Club of Southern California, 1937. Recommendations for the betterment of street and highway traffic conditions in Los Angeles, as proposed by the Club's Engineering Dept. Detailed surveys show recent increases in traffic and decreases in travel time. Among the recommendations: 1. A network of motorways be constructed to serve the entire metropolitan area. 2. The removal of all street railways from from commercial and residential streets, and the creation of " an adequate metropolitan motor bus system with off-street terminals." This is less than half-hearted; pages are devoted to describing the massive decline in public transportation, its flaws, and why the automobile is better suited for Los Angeles's growth and prosperity. 3. Prohibit curb parking on all commercial streets and highways. More off-street parking facilities. $250.00

First edition. 30.5 cm; 52 pp.; illustrated from photographs, maps, and plans, many folding. Owner's name; light soiling to cover; else a very good copy in wrappers.

69. (New York City) ABRAMOVITZ, MAX, SIMON BREINES & ROBERT W. CUTLER. New York Civic Center. New York: Civic Center Committee, 1962. The architects' proposal for a new "Civic Center in the City Hall area" to meet the expanding needs of the city government working out of a City Hall built in 1812 and a Municipal Building built a hundred years later. Plans for a Center had been considered since at least 1945; this latest attempt involved demolishing another part of the lower Manhattan district for a new Civic Center with a landscaped mall including: a new Municipal building, Executive Office Building, Federal Office Building, Customs Court, Police Hdqtrs., jail, parking for 1,100 cars, etc. The design includes a large traffic-free Pedestrian Zone, but at the cost of a new North-South Express road from Brooklyn Bridge to Canal St., new Arterial Traffic Routes, service loops, spurs, as well as any new highway Moses was promoting. An ambitious, if not visionary plan promising "[N]ew buildings grouped around broad park-like plazas and related to good residential areas providing convenient housing for government workers." Adjacent blocks were to be considered a "land bank" for use when further expansion was needed. Signed by the architects. $250.00

First edition. 46 cm; 30 pp.; illustrated from photographs, maps, and drawings. Some paper clip rust marks; light wear to covers; a good copy or better in wire-bound boards.

70. (---) PORT OF NEW YORK AUTHORITY. Heliport Location and Design. New York: Port of New York Authority, 1956. 73. (---) (Zoning) EAST MIDTOWN STEERING COMMITTEE. Final Report. New York: East Midtown Steering Committee, 2015. Summary of the work of Committee formed to promote the rezoning of the East Midtown area. The Committee's stated mission was to "identify planning policies that enhance East Midtown's economic competitiveness," and which encourage as-of-right, higher density and modernized office development. The development, however, must be accompanied by upgrades to transportation and public amenities, and the preservation of local historic resources. $20.00

First edition. 28 cm; 89 pp.; illustrated from photographs, plans, and maps. A fine copy in wrappers.

74. SAN FRANCISCO DEPARTMENT OF CITY PLANNING. Height Limits in Northeastern San Francisco. SF: SF Dept. City Planning, 1963. The department's analysis of building height limits in the northeast corner of the city, limited by recent law to forty feet. It documents the department's futile search for a compromise that will "preserve to the general public the depth and breadth of view...and sweeping panoramas that are the greatest asset of San Francisco...[which] should not be dissipated or diluted by high buildings constructed under alternate proposals considered in this study," these alternate proposals allowing variations from the height limit. Furthermore the study recommends expanding height limitations to other parts of the city. $85.00

21.5 cm; 49 pp.; illustrated from photographs and plans. Owner's stamps to cover; else a good copy in pictorial wrappers.

75. (Seattle) NELSEN, IBSEN. An Urban Waterfront Community: Seattle. Seattle: Ibsen Nelsen & Assoc., 1974. Nelsen's plan for the South Lake Union development, including "condominiums, offices, and ground floor shops...the existing pier will be remodeled to include moorage for houseboats and restaurant," etc. "All of the lake shore will developed and freely open to the public." $65.00

First edition. 22 cm; 20 pp.; illustrated from photographs, plans, drawings, and maps. A fine copy in wrappers.

76. (Zoning) AMERICAN PETROLEUM INSTITUTE. The Place of the Service Station in the Community. New York: API, 1957. Booklet detailing the advantages of having plenty of gas stations everywhere, a "neighborhood convenience", etc., but actually promoting active rezoning campaigns to allow stations in every retail district. $40.00

21 cm; 16 pp.; illustrated from photographs. A very good copy in wrappers.
